ON THE CASE: THE MISSING ARTWORK

If you live under a form of pressurized sediment of some sort and haven't heard the news, there's been a crime committed at our very own museum. As of midafternoon on Tuesday, we learned that a thief abducted one of our proudly featuring artworks: 2 touching circle mirrors. While this all feels very The Scream, (circa 2004, NY),-esque, no other details have been reported on how it was stolen, but the request is that the piece is returned to campus safety, no questions asked. I don't know about you, but I have a feeling there are going to be a lot of questions.

Getting right on to the case, I searched for a lead on campus; so, I started with our very own student body. I conducted interviews and reported findings below for further analysis with later developments.

Question: "Who do you think stole the circle mirrors?"

"I think it was Weinberg because he's always said he's been able to see himself at Denison, what else would that mean?" - M.K.

"What? I didn't get that email, but did you get the one about the lube boxes?" - P.S.

"No way. We have a museum? This school is stacked, and it invests money in things that no one cares about. Are you going to publish this? Tell them to bring back the slayer sushi" and then

"I don't know who them is, the slayer sushi gods?" - N.L

"Damn, I didn't even know about that, but I guess whoever stole it ought to take a long, hard look at themselves" - K.B.

"It has got to be either someone from the men's soccer or the men's baseball because they are all slimes and slime is sticky,...sounds like a case of sticky fingers to me!"

and also

"What do you mean? This doesn't have anything to do with the fact that I've only hooked up with guys from the men's soccer and the men's baseball team" -L.S.

PSA: YOU CAN BUY DUCKS FOR LIKE FIVE DOLLARS ON CRAIGSLIST

Central Ohio is farm country and farm country means farms and farms mean DUCKS. I was perusing the for sale listings as I usually do when I don't know what to write about and I found several dozen listings for live ducks in the Columbus area. As a general rule, these ducks are around five dollars apiece, have very few miles on them, and will likely be sold with no questions asked.

Do what you will with this information.
