JURY DUTY

I received a letter from the Oregon Circuit Court of Appeals to appear for jury duty on December 16. That is the middle of finals so I need to call them and get an exception for being a student and, well, being 2/3 of a continent away. As much as I would genuinely love to be on a jury I got thinking of other ways to get out of jury duty. Before the list was to get out of jury duty is an important part of democracy and judicial system. It put the fate of the accused in the hands of their peers and not those of the government. It is on all of use to protect these rights by serving on juries. Ways to get out of jury duty:

1. Get a doctor's note saying jury duty would be too much hardship for you to serve. Additionally, a degree from Kenyon can prove that it would be too much mental hardship for you.
2. When being screened by lawyers mutter "if the glove doesn't fit you must always acquit" no matter what the case is
3. Pick a type of people to irrationally hate like book publishers, merchant marines, or Canadians.
4. Be a liberal arts student so no matter what the case you'll have some previous knowledge on any subject or be a freshman in a philosophy class so you will know everything already
5. Ask about the alcohol policy of the court room because you have already started - Zach Correia, Head Writer
