Y'ALL EVER SEEN GAME NIGHT?

During my Bullsheet interview way back in December 2018, I was asked what I would want to write about if I were to become a writer for the sheet. I said, “movie reviews,” like a loser. Over a year has passed since, and I still have not written a single movie review since joining the staff. Until now!

Let’s travel back down Memory Lane and hang a Louie on Recollection Road, this time to June of 2018. Picture a young me, sitting on a couch, killing the last few months of my pre-university career watching dumb movies. Enter: my little sister, who apparently thinks The Shape of Water is boring (not 100% wrong) and wants to watch a comedy. So she puts on this Game Night. I hadn’t heard of it.

Verdict: it was a cool ass movie. The plot follows Jason Bateman (not his character’s name), Rachel McAdams (not her character’s name) and friends as they go off on a crazy night of escapades that aren’t what they seem. If that sounds forgettable to you, just hang on, I thought the same thing. The truth is that each and every scene is very cleverly written and executed, with almost every gag paralleling some sort of tabletop board game. Jason Bateman brings strong Arrested Development energy, and if you don’t already think Rachel McAdams is one of the most attractive people in Hollywood, you will after watching this movie. It’s surprisingly packed with twisty turns, if you’re into that, and the attention to detail really shows.

Now I’m not saying this movie is the next Citizen Kane, or even the Citizen Kane of Jason Bateman comedies, but I do think that it is a movie that may have flown under the radar for some people, like me, and is worthy of a watch. Also, James really needed to fill the sheet and he didn’t think my “This Guy on M*A*S*H is Wearing a Really Cool Hat” article had much potential.

JOSH POE LOSES HIS MIND

Are ghosts real? You bet your apples they are. “Come on Josh” I hear you saying through my computer screen, while yes there is no scientific proof that ghosts exist, I have a firsthand account of a ghost sighting right here on this campus, isn’t that crazy? The story starts as finals week was upon us last semester and as I was up late night studying on the top floor of Higley Hall and I suddenly realized that i forgot my phone charger in the basement computer lab and I decided to take the stairs for health reasons. And as I am walking down the steps I saw a light as if someone had a lighter outside and I had a lot of thoughts mainly among them the thought of its almost 6 am why are you up. But the odd thing was that I didn’t see a person or even a real figure with the lighter and i just wrote it off to it being dark. So I went to the lab found my charger and started to walk out. I heard this almost like whine outside the lab. But, the lab always makes weird sounds cause of the computer always booting up. I started walking out the label with my headphones on while listening to Drake. I saw this tall dark figure at the end of the hall now the lights in the hall weren't all on so it wasn't Like you could see the entire hall clearly. As I walked to the stairs the figure started moving towards me slowly and I figured it was just another person trying to get a good jump on studying for the day so I was just trying to change the song on my phone as I walked past the figure and I felt a little gust of wind as I past the figure. I was curious so I turned around and the figure.....was gone like not it was near any doors or anything or any doors were open for someone going in them. This event was terrifying absolutely terrifying I haven't set foot in that building since then in the night because it is too scary. I feel like though I owe it to society to go back there around 6 am to see if this ghost comes back, so I will be trying to get back to see the ghost.
