THIS WEEK ON AMERICA

Monday: The Bachelor in the Heartland

The hunt for love with Iowa, featuring a hard-charging former VP from a blue collar family, a grumpy old senator full of 60's idealism, a young mayor who can be a real beast, a midwest mom from next door who is a prosecutor at heart and a sophisticated Oklahoma girl who speaks her mind and has a plan for that.

(Programming Note: No rose ceremony due to boomers trying to use an app)

Tuesday: The MAGA Wing

The President addresses the nation, and a Democrat House that is willing to rip everything up. The country discovers an invited guest to the State of the Union speech receiving the Medal of Freedom has a questionable background, while the president does three-hours of tweeting from the West Wing. Kushner releases his Middle East peace plan while Miller bans more Muslims from entering the country.

Wednesday: Law and Order: Senatorial Victims Unit

To avoid the consequences of a bad phone call, a corrupt president does not cooperate with a House investigation into abuse of power. During the vote, only one former presidential nominee is willing to cross party lines.

Thursday: The fine programming over at CBS

Friday: WWE: DNC Debate

After making a huge change to this week's DebateSlam, the DNC gives Bloomberg a chance to become the centrist's candidate by making Biden defend his Front Runner Title against him and South Bend Lightweight Mayor Pete Buttigieg in the main event. For the first time ever, Bernie Sanders steps into the cage with a fellow progressive as he faces off with Elizabeth Warren. Plus, Amy Klobuchar takes on not being in a state next to Minnesota, Yang battles low poll numbers, and much more on this edition of DNC Debate.

DENISON IS A DEATH TRAP.

Don't ask why, but recently a group of friends and I were so inclined that we watched arguably the greatest film saga of recent history. Yes, you guessed it, we watched all the Final Destinations. If you haven't had the absolute pleasure of doing so, you're missing out. One review said it was a "grim piece of work" and it got a wonderful 30% on rotten tomatoes, but you know what I won't take that kind of negativity. Sure, everyone dies in maybe the most horrific, unrealistic and nauseating ways (lots of impaling and breaking of bones), but at the same time, it's the most fun I've had watching movies maybe ever. That might make me a sociopath but that's spicy and I wouldn't mind putting that on my LinkedIn.

You know what they say; Life imitates art. And after watching these cinematic masterpieces, I felt divinely inspired. So, one for each film, here is a list I have compiled of the top 5 ways that death might decide it's your time to go on Denison's campus:

FROM FRONT

- 1) The goddamn flu: In case you missed whisler's not so ~subtle~ heads up, the flu is back and better than ever. Much like every sequel to final destination (there are FIVE) this shiz will never stop. Isolate yourself, cut your friends off, do what you have to do. This one's multi-faceted because if anyone of you plebs cough on me I will kill you on site.

- 2) Slipping in Slayter: I do not know what I did to be blessed with this pleasure, but over the past week I think I've seen someone drop sauce in slayter every. single. day. They say most murders are committed by loved ones and you know what if my one true love, chipotle mayo, decided it was my time to go I would have no choice but to be ok with that. I'll die by my sword.

- 3) Food poisoning at Curtis: This one is a little too real. The mix of cuisines sometimes makes my stomach feel so ~woozy~ so I have a genuine fear it might happen very soon.

- 4) Denison Venison kicking you into next decade: Sure, they're cute, but you're lying to yourself if you don't think they can and will absolutely demolish you if they joined forces. Like 5 of them would do the trick. We're safe as long as they remain blissfully ignorant about their strength in numbers...

- 5) A single disappointed look from daddy Weinberg: I respect no one more on this campus than our lord and saviour, Dr. Weinberg. I crave approval from him more than my own parents. He probably has no clue who I am but if he EVER looked at me with even a shred of disappointment, I don't think I could take it. What else would be left to live for. I'd off myself on site and if you wouldn't do the same you need to get your priorities in check and leave.

This is definitely the full list, just some of my personal favs. Godspeed my friends. Hope you make it to the end of semester!!!!!! Xoxo
