JUST WHEN YOU THOUGHT HE WAS DONE!!!

A strange hoofprint was found last week in the Bioreserve, quartered rather than cloven, with deep markings revealing an enormous weight behind whatever left this print. Ellie Schrader, the last Forest Dweller, has delivered a series of notebooks, bound in an unknown leather and written in iron-gall ink, in which were described these fair beasts.

CAMPUS CRYPTIDS: VOLUME IV

The Denny Dryads

A plague has come across these fair beings, which have for so many years guarded our college upon a hill. Everywhere one turns, one sees the dead and dying as leaves fall from their frames. With the Dryads not here to protect us, who will?

The Morrow Merrow

In Morrow House, on the second floor, there is a urinal. Now this is not entirely unusual, however the second floor has historically been an all-female floor. See the origin of this urinal goes all the way back to the founding of the school in 1831. In order to secure free access to Ebaugh pond and Raccoon Creek, the founder of the school, Theodosius T. Weinberg, was forced into a dark pact with the Merrow of central Ohio, in which he gave the Merrow free housing and tuition to Denison in return for a long life and access to free water. Morrow House has traditionally been the home of the Merrow, and the urinal secretly hides a tunnel into the watery depths in which they reside.

Slayter Ghouls

At precisely 2:15 am on Saturdays a horde of figures arrive at Slayter and pound upon the glass doors, wishing to be let in. They mumble nonsensical phrases, "Slayter Tots," "Late night," "Chipotle Mayo". The few that manage to breach the walls of Slayter can be seen, glassy-eyed, gnawing upon assorted food stuffs with little or no regard to proper etiquette. As they sit in a corner mumbling to themselves and guzzling down sandwiches they seem almost mindless, but they are not to be underestimated. Their unique curse makes them almost fearless—and some become quite aggressive.

Ghost Truck

It's a Truck. It's a Ghost. Beep Beep Motherf*ckers.

Something concerns me about this founder. . . Theodosius T. Weinberg. Something I can't quite place. Whatever dark force is influencing the appearance of these creatures seems to go deeper than we could ever imagine.
