ETIQUETTE 101

As we head home for thanksgiving (thee best time to give thanks to the colonizers in your life), some of us have some family members we may or may not agree with on certain issues. And if you're like me, you've probably had some very polite and definitely cordial confrontations with your family. Especially since we'll be home for almost two and a half whole months, you get to spend extra time with your lovely family! Below, I have compiled a list of my applicable-to-any-situation, personal favorite, very polite excuses or responses when you find yourself in one of those aforementioned, very polite and definitely cordial confrontations. They are sorted by how angry/annoyed you are, and between excuses versus responses.

Anger level:	Responses:	Excuses to exit (in no order related to anger level)
100!!! Brace 4 impact	*pour a drink on your c*p uncle*	"I think I left a candle burning. I need to leave."
Gimme something to break	"Yes, I may be marrying a man, but at least my wife didn't walk in on me and my secretary!!!"	"I have some swamp ass I need to clean up, I'll be back!" don't come back
I am angry.	"Sam, the first night at BED when you left, Ron made out with two girls and put his head between two cocktail waitress's breasts..."	"So funny you should say that, I actually need to go bang my head against the wall- I'll be back in time for pie!!"
>:(I don't have a script for this one, but bring up one of their insecurities and use. It. against. Them!!!!	"Excuse me for one moment, I'm just going to touch up on my Communist Manifesto "
Annoyed enough to warrant a passive-aggressive blow, but i'll allow it	"Good one, Uncle Ron! That reminds me of the time you went to rehab and...."	"I just remembered I have a virtual doctor's appointment, I'll be back soon!"

There you have it! Unfortunately, I have taken a few etiquette classes, and I think that Ms. Megan would approve of these. Let me know if you use these, and how they go!!!

Being at school means we also can't leave campus, so tattoos r a no. But we are going home soon, so that door is open if you are willing to risk it in the third wave of the pandemic! Personally, I love knuckle tattoos, but I am deciding what phrase or cute thing I should get. Below, I have listed some ideas I have for myself, or the potential reader!
