SEARCH HISTORIES OF OUR NATION'S LEADERS

In case you haven't heard the election was on Tuesday. No wait, it was on Wednesday. Or was it Thursday? Oh that's right, it is all of those days because it has turned into a never ending cycle of anticipation and anxiety. All jokes aside, I hope everyone is coping well and just trying to be patient. While we wait the results, I have put together a list of what are the likely google search histories of our potential leaders. Here's hoping we have results soon. If not, the Bullsheet staff is more than happy to take on the role of leading this country.

Trump:

- What is the electoral college?
- How many states are there?
- How to convince Puerto Ricans to vote for me?
- Do British people vote in the U.S. election?
- How to write victory speech?
- What is the name of that bubbly drink people have when they celebrate something?
- How to pop the "Champagne" beverage?
- What do the blue and red colors on the map mean?
- Where is Pennsylvania?
- What is "Joe" short for?
- Who is this man they keep calling cheeto?
- Zillow: homes for sale in DC area
- Is it legal to date your daughter?
- Who did Melania vote for?
- Do masks actually stop Covid-19?
- Can you drink hand sanitizer to stop Covid?
- Is Hawaii a state?
- Is Alaska a state?
- Does Canada vote in the U.S. election?
- Is Scranton, Pennsylvania a real place?
- What to do when you lose a big contest?
- If I lose the election, can I still be president?

Biden:

- How fast can I move into the White House?
- Does the White House have a doggy door?
- Population of Nevada
- how many votes do I need to win Nevada?
- When does the election end?
- Is Trump a real person?
- What state is Trump from?
- What is Trump's first name?
- How to be a good leader?
- Obama's secrets for success

Fruit-in-Jars 101

JAM

I recently found myself wondering what is the difference between jam and jelly. Upon further investigation, I realized how many different types of fruit-in-jars combinations there are. It actually blew my mind. Some are just for citrus fruits, some are for sliced fruits, some are for whole fruits, etc. The possibilities are endless. I have included a diagram that I found most helpful in explaining the differences between all the jarred fruit combinations. I hope this can help others like me who are stuck in a state of fruity confusion. My least favorite is the curd because I don't like eggs and the word "curd" is gross to me. Please share with me your least favorite type of fruit-in-a-jar. My only quom with this diagram is that it left out compote, which is one of the most important types of broken-down-fruit combination.

TO STEWART MOORE

Dear Sir, I completely understand your point of view, I thank you for sharing your views and pushing important political discourse and I feel sorry for what you and your group have gone through. However my friend there is one silver lining in all of this, at least now you get just a little sneak peak or a taste as to what it means to be a black man or woman living in a White America. You being afraid to speak out because of retribution should give you an idea of what my community has had to go through for over 400 years since before the inception of this country.
