

EXQUISITE DINING OPTIONS!

POV: You just overpaid for a meal plan and want to know where to spend your $1800 declining dollars. There are five main dining areas: Curtis, Huffman, Slayter, Silverstein, or the Nest. To make things simple, I am going to rate these 5 dining locations from best to worst:

1. Silverstein or 'Slivy's'

Silverstein offers an impressive array of hot food choices, a nice market area, as well as a nice place to sit and eat. This is by far the best food on campus, and the prices are actually quite reasonable.

2. Slayter Market

Slayter offers some decent burgers, subs, bowls, a market, and a late-night option as well. Slayter takes the second spot behind Silverstein because it is slightly worse in about every way. If the food was more consistent, it may be competitive for the first spot.

3. The Nest

The Nest is honestly quite good food, arguably better than Slayter depending on what you choose, but it is only open late at night, and the menu never changes. Eat here once or twice a week max so you do not hate bacon mac and cheese in your first month on campus.

4. Huffman

Huffman, similar to Curtis, is very hit or miss. Some days they will have above-average food, but most days it will be subpar. The dining area looks worse than most middle school cafeterias, the food is average most days, and the lines are typically pretty long.

5. Curtis

Undoubtedly the worst place to spend your declining on campus. The dining area is actually quite nice, and as a freshman, you are surrounded by your peers, but the food is tolerable at best. Out of roughly 100 meals I have eaten at Curtis, 10 have been average, 60 have been tolerable and the remaining 30 were debateably edible. If you are within walking distance of any of the other 4 dining options, I recommend you go there.

Student Submission

-Manning McGrath. class of 2024

A RESPONSE FROM ME, THE EDITOR

Listen here, you poor, naive soul. I'm not sure if Supreme Chancellor James Whitney put a gun to your head and forced you to write such aggressive Curtis slander, but in the wise words of the late Jessica Walter, I won't hear it, and I won't respond to it. You what, actually, I will respond to it.

First of all, you're damn right the dining area is quite nice. It's actually fucking exquisite. Secondly, your evaluation of the meals. Have you even tried the tikka masala? Tortellini Mondays?! Fair Food Fridays!?!?!? (DISCLAIMER: I don't actually know if they do those anymore but they did my freshman year and it definitely was not good for my health.) Additionally, it would be a downright shame not to mention the wonderful, kind, beautiful, hardworking, and caring staff they have at Curtis. I love every one of them with all my heart. Also, the loner desks are actually quite nice for studying, and if you're an upperclassmen you're spared the embarrassment of eating alone because you're surrounded by first-years and only first-years.

-Jack May, Junior Editor

Staff "college regrets" Box

Charlie "hiring jack" Schweiger, Managing Editor
James "living with jack" Whitney, Junior Editor
Jack "freshman year" May, Junior Editor
Betsy "jack" Wagner, Sophomore Editor
Katie "spice bowl" Kerrigan, Head Writer
Elizabeth "coming to campus at all" Arterberry, Senior Writer
Maggie "red frame lab" Bell, Junior Writer
Blythe "chris moneymaker" Dahlem, Sophomore Writer
Ellie "homestead" Schrader, Sophomore Writer
William "frog" Kelsey, Sophomore Writer
Emma "living with betsy" Rutherford, Sophomore Writer

