BLYTHE READS THE NEWS!

Hey everybody, I'm gonna start doing a little segment here on the 'Sheet where I discuss some of the craziest headlines I've read this week. This first one is by far my favorite:

Trinity College in Perth bans mullet haircuts, labeling them 'unacceptable'

Mullets are OUT, sorry ladies. Trinity College, an elite private boys school in Perth has deemed that Mullets do not follow their standards of haircuts that are "of a conservative nature" and cut above the collar. On top of Mullets, the school is also banning (or has previously banned): rat tails, top knots, mohawks, extra-long fringes, or any other non-conventional style cuts" which they explicate in their "Student Diary." One of my favorite parts about this story is that students whose haircut doesn't meet their good christian values will be picked up by their parents and ordered to get a haircut. Now, that's extreme, but imagine how pissed off your parents would be if the school called them at work to tell them to uproot their day to make their son get a haircut. I know my parents would be livid, and if I were a parent I'd just tell the school to shave his head on the spot. They should get a barber in the school to just cut these students' hair instead of forcing their parents to pick them up.

Two people have commented on this groundbreaking story. The school's deputy principal said that the students who are found wearing the presently trending mullet haircut will, "be directed to the local barber or their preferred hair stylist to rectify any issues." Thank GOD they specified that the students could go to their preferred hair stylist, imagine if these poor kids had to suffer from a terrible cut from the local barber. I bet the barber was pissed off when he read this, cause he secretly made a deal with the school to get rid of mullets so he could get some extra business, and then they threw this curveball at him. West Australian Premier Mark McGowan also felt the need to comment on this issue. "I'm very pro mullet, it's a unique Australian invention – one which we've been selling to the world, but I'll let the school make their own decisions... I'm pro mullet, I'm not so pro-rat's tails – rat's tails are a bit beyond the pale." I'm glad he came out as pro mullet, but it's kinda divisive to be anti-rat tail. So controversial, yet so brave. I think we should start asking our politicians these hard hitting questions so we can figure out who we're really voting for. If you have questions about Aussie politics, email ruther_e2@denison.edu (the Bullsheet's resident Australian).

There were some great headlines, here's a few honorable mentions:

"Gweneth Paltrow has Bottled the Smell of Kim Kardashian's Orgasm"

"Nike Deniez Involvement with Lil Nas X's 'Satan Shoes' Containing Human Blood"

"Nike Sues Lil Nas X 'Satan Shoes' with Human Blood in Soles"

"Cargo ship draws giant penis in Red Sea then becomes wedged in Suez Canal"

TECHNOLOGY

Technology: A Gift? A Curse? Both. Leave It Alone.

Firstly, I wanna say R.I.P Adobe Flash. Fly high sweet angle you will be missed. Fly high love.

It's been seemingly obvious that the digital age is among all of us. And all of these advancements in society are I guess supposed to make life convenient for us because it adds simplicity for the average person. In some ways it has. You can order groceries with a press of a button. People can send a message to the other side of the world in minutes. This tech stuff seems to be working in our favor.

However, what are we doing? Shouldn't we be off in the forest eating berries and stuff? Humans have evolved so much that now we're making our own damn problems. Mining Bitcoin is bad for the environment!?! How the fuck are we mining Bitcoin!?! What is a stock? I don't need the answers to any of these questions because I have sexy privileges. But I am also an advocate for tradition and civilization has strayed too far from it. We need to wake up, tear our clothes, and run into the woods with the groundhogs like nature intended. Why must we participate in politics?

And I know what you're gonna say. "But Shona, look where technology has gotten us!" And I agree. We have shoes on our feet because of science. Every single Godzilla movie released is a gift to society. But why do I have to pay and file taxes? Riddle me that. See, I'm here for the people. And sometimes we have to hear things we won't like. And I think that we as humans deserve to be free. Free from the shitty debt we'll be in in 15 years. Why not manifest the wild? Become feral and eat worms before the robots attack you because your IRS form is filled out wrong. That future is nearer than you think. Put the damn phone down and don't ask what I typed this from. I used a typewriter. Obviously.
