DOWN WITH THE MOSQUITOS

HAPPPPY SPRING! As we are approaching the end of the school year, spring is in the air. Days are longer, the sun is out, and flowers are blooming. Disregarding the snow we had last week, the weather is getting warmer. This of course makes us all very excited! I love spring and summer: the sun is out, I am tan, the sun sets so late, the flowers are beautiful, I can sit/play/drink outside! The onset of warm weather has its downsides though: sunburns, the impending doom of finals, pollen allergies, and BUGS, specifically mosquitos. Not only is mosquitos a very hard word to spell, but the actual bug is the literal worst! I am not a bug fan in general but I can put up with some of them and I respect some because I know they have a real purpose on this earth. Mosquitos are not on that list. I literally can not think of one redeeming quality for that flying menace. Their bites really hurt and are itchy, they are EVERYWHERE and so annoying, and they carry disease. I am literally terrified of the diseases that they carry. I know the diseases aren't as common in the US but still, that is so scary. Their diseases are lethal and those that don't kill you have serious and debilitating effects. The illnesses that are spread are numerous and incredibly scary - I don't recommend researching them, it made me more scared. I am incredibly thankful we live in the US when it comes to mosquitos. Also, they are just annoying as frick. They won't leave you alone and honestly most bug sprays (at least OFF brand) don't do that much to really repel them. Also, it seems that some people have more "attractive" and delicious blood to mosquitos than others, so people (like myself) seem to get bitten way more than other people regardless of the protection you are wearing. Mosquitos are disgusting looking too. Have you ever seen a close up shot of them, it is horrifying. They are gross, infuriating, scary, and dangerous. I have done some reading and the food chain would be okay if all the mosquitos died because no animal relies solely on them for food. THINK ABOUT THAT! If they could wiped out, it would literally not ruin the food chain.

I am excited for summer but I am not excited for the onset of mosquitos who treat my legs like a personal blood playground. And don't even get me started on cascades..... giant bug monsters (but at least they don't hurt me). Thank you for coming to my Ted Talk, which was literally just a rant on mosquitos. I hope some of our readers share this disdain for the horrible creatures. Honestly, if you like mosquitos, you got some issues... I can't even sugar coat it, you just are weird.

THINGS TO GET YOU THROUGH THE WEEK

QUOTES FROM OUR EDITORS

Due to the recent application and interview process we have gone through the past few weeks as we were attempting to find new hooligans for this publications, the current staff has spent way too much time together. This forces us to actually communicate and learn about each other. During our last few interactions, I have taken it upon myself to note some of the most memorable quotes said by the editors to share with you all so you can get a glimpse into the chaos of us. I won't tell you who said the quotes that way it is a fun guessing game! Hint, it was either Charlie, Katie, James, Jack, or Betsy.

- “Charlie, you thrive in an all white environment. You use it to your full advantage.”
- “Ya I would prolly marry or f**k most of the wiggles”
- “Slivy’s sounds like a name for a vagina.”
- “Yo, you guys gettin your nussies swabbed this week?”
- “I would use a baby’s soft spot as an ash tray.”
