I CAN'T BELIEVE THIS SCHOOL YEAR WAS REAL

I think everyone can agree that this school year was so so weird. Did it make it a bad year? Surprisingly... no (although, I'm aware that this was not the case for everyone). And as this semester comes to an end, I find myself in a limbo of "Jesus Christ I need a mother effing break" to "Oh crap, I'm gonna really miss the people that helped me get through this." Throughout this whole year there were several moments that I can only describe as "post-nut clarity" in the sense that as soon as I would reflect on events that happened I'd say to myself, "this can not be real." That being said please let me walk you through some of the things that I still can't believe actually happened.

Taking a ceramics class over zoom is a legitimate thing. Where's the sexiness with that?? WTF

There was an actual bee infestation on campus in the fall and it was obviously the last thing on Denison's To Do list

I hope this email finds you all well. I am reaching out because facilities noticed a blanket hanging outside of the window in your room. Per the housing code, unfortunately, hanging anything outside of a window violates the code. Please remove the item hanging outside of the window as soon as possible, and do not hang anything else out of the window in the future. If you are not in a room with items hanging outside of a window, please just reply and let me know. I will check on the status of the hanging item on Monday, and if it is not removed, I will be in touch again. Let me know if you have any questions.

A felt skeleton, Dr. Hardon, got approximately 6 months of sweet fresh air by hanging outside my window before my roommate and I finally got busted by the CC.

Students could build their own weekends this spring semester by purposely scheduling their vaccine over class time. To keep the fun going, you could then guilt-free skip classes the day after because being sick from the vaccine is now an actual excuse! I mean truly, it's all about looking at the silver linings.

MORE DEEP & INSIGHTFUL REFLECTIONS FROM BETSY

Matching Patagonia Synchronilla moment with future DCGA president Daniel Seely, crazy.

Student's became completely desensitized to seeing a giant corkboard lugged around by a freshmen every weekend with the spray painted message of "MASK ON." Like that's normal now...

Friends, enemies, and lovers. There was no difference when it came to quarantine. It took and it took, no one was safe.

The election lasted like 10 million days and that was cool

Student's rejoiced with the news of a new dining location on campus. In fact, they were so excited that they could look past the overly sexual name, Slivy's. Even better they have merch!

SPRING BREAK 2021!! A midweek weekend that occurred over St. Patrick's should have most definitely not been labeled as a Wellness Weekend. I swear 60% of campus was tripping, 30% was dartying, and 10% were doing both.

The Bullsheet staff finally got a group photo! I mean kind of... there are like 15 different variations and none of them have the complete staff, but hey, it's the thought that counts!
