NORM MOTHERFUCKING MACDONALD

Norm Macdonald, comedic icon, former SNL “Weekend Update” Host, and one of my personal comedy icons passed away today (9/14) after a 9 year long private battle with cancer. Norm didn’t lose his battle with cancer, as he so eloquently put in one of his comedy specials, “I’m no doctor, but I’m pretty sure when you die, the cancer also dies at the same time. So that to me is not a loss, it’s a draw.” This is probably my second eulogizing piece, or maybe my third, but so many great comedians and influences of mine have passed away recently and I think it’s only right to tell other people who might not have heard of them before about their greatness. So, I wanted to take a moment to look back at some of the most iconic Norm quotes from his time in Comedy, and encourage all of you to watch some of his comedy on Youtube, Netflix, etc.

“OJ Simpson was in a different kind of courtroom this week attempting to regain custody of his two children. In order to prove to the court how much he loves his kids, OJ pointed out, ‘hey, they’re still alive aren’t they?’”

“I went to a hypnotist. He put me under a spell, and every time I had a craving for a cigarette, I would throw up. It’s very embarrassing right after sex. I find it pretty hard to get that second date after that. Girls get all snobby after you barf on them.”

“Comedy is surprises, so if you’re intending to make somebody laugh and they don’t laugh, that’s funny.”

I won’t type this one but look up the Norm Macdonald cab driver joke, his Professor of Logic joke, and his Moth Joke. Those are simply comedy at it’s best.

“Why do dogs always race to the door when the doorbell rings? It’s almost never for them.”

“Hey this occurred to me today I.D. is a strange abbreviation when you think about it. I is short for... ‘I’, and then D... is short for ‘Dentification’”.

This is all I’ll write for now, Norm’s best jokes are the longer form ones delivered in context with the cadence of his delivery and I’d highly recommend checking out the “I’m Not Norm” youtube channel for the best Norm compilations. He was truly one of the greatest and he’ll be missed dearly, and comedy like his will never be delivered the same.
