IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention, Denison students and staff alike! It's that time of the year, when the Granville Bureau of Information Resource Management releases their pre-planned week long itinerary. Everyone is going to have the exact same week and we are all going to like it, and not complain, because we all know complainers get sent to rehabilitation in the abandoned tunnels running beneath the Hill. and don't come back.

Without further ado, here is next week's (April 11th-17th) schedule, including the forecast.

MONDAY

Don't be afraid of that putrid, awful burning stench spreading throughout town. It's just a few odds and ends the town council forgot to wrap up.

Prepare for burning ash to rain down upon all of Granville.

TUESDAY

NO MORE ANIMALS! They're all gone. Every last one. Even the ones we don't know exist. They'll be back next week, though, and hungry for blood.

Great picnic weather!

WEDNESDAY

You're not hearing things--- the emergency sirens will be blaring 12am-11:59pm. We suggest you call of work, close your eyes, and enter a deep meditative state.

Pack an umbrella, but not for the reasons you might think.

THURSDAY

It's detox day! Get rid of your toxic waste by pouring it in the local water supply, or a distant one. It doesn't matter. Pour it in your toilet if you have to. Just GET RID OF IT.

Oozing ground alert. Avoid grass patches at all costs.

FRIDAY

Have you ever seen an angel cry? Step outside at exactly 3:03pm, look up at the sky, and weep along with them. Sponsored by Granville Parks & Rec.

Hell and Ohio will both freeze overnight. Bundle up!

SATURDAY

ANIMALS ARE BACK!!! But only a select few: deer, flies, groundhogs, fish. Be wary of anything else--those are changelings seeking human hosts.

Cloudy, chance of sun in the late afternoon.

SUNDAY

There will be no longer be any more Sundays from here on out.

No weather report available.
