HOW TO PLAY DIE

It's been explained to me many times, yes, but each time it makes less sense. So, as I watch my friends do their little dance and drink their little beers, I take notes so that someday I can hopefully hold my own in a game of all-male die. Here are the rules.

1. First, Eat Your Wheaties! This is essential to the success of the game.
2. Someone with a hat sitting too high on their head will give you a die. This means you're "It".
3. Hold the die like it's a hot coal searing through your hand, but have the grace and stature of a figure skater. Stand in this pose for at least 10 seconds. Your mouth must be open as you do this (it helps with your concentration).
4. Jump as high as you can, and do a fun little dance. Try to click your heels together, and a jolly yodel might help too. Again, your mouth must remain open.
5. The entirety of this game depends on your stance before the throw, like a bird of paradise mating ceremony in those David Attenborough documentaries. The throw height means nothing. The die placement means nothing. The cups mean even less.
6. It seems like making a grunt after the die hits the table encourages some type of primordial community building. I will look into this more thoroughly.
7. The center tagger will light a pinecone on fire and chuck it over the basket. The player will then hit the pinecone and run to knock a cedar stick off the cross rods. Then the twig-runners dash back and forth until the pinecone burns out and the umpire calls "Hotbox".
8. Count up how many scoredowns you have and divide that by nine.

D-DAY PERFORMER

Good news! I have information about who the D-Day artist is! Lumpy and The Dumpers will be playing D-Day this year! With hit songs such as:

Huff my Sack
Hair on the inside
Sex Pit
Gnats in the pisser
Spider Bite
Pee in the Pool

They will be playing all of these songs plus music from their most recent album: Music to Hump a Trashcan To.
