CONFESSIONS FROM THE WORST MEMBER OF THE BULLSHEET

Hello valued and/or sexy readers. My name is Lauren Ehlers, and I am the elusive and horribly underachieving tenth new member of the Bullsheet. As such, this is my first article of the semester.

You may wonder how that's possible, given that it's November and there have been many, many issues to which I could've contributed. I'm here (finally) to explain: it's something called "I am so cool and busy and philanthropic that I can't spare a single second of my day to write for this exquisite publication."

It is definitely not called "I feel no immediate pressure to produce content and therefore will not write a single word until my editors are threatening to put me out on my ass in the cold, actually-ominously-not-cold Ohio autumn."

However, it's time for me to turn a new leaf, as someone once said and someone else was probably confused by. I'm going to stop being elusive and under-achieving and start being non-elusive and medium-achieving. As a sign of good faith, I will let you all in on some private information about myself so that we can feel as close as we wouldn't have anyway if I'd been writing pieces for you guys this whole time.

- 1.) I enjoy the look of clogs.
- 2.) I take twelve enormous collagen pills per day in the hopes that they'll make my hair look like Mick's. They're not working.
- 3.) Sometimes I get scared.
- 4.) Brin really is a natural blonde.
- 5.) I didn't practice for my guitar lesson last week:/'
- 6.) Sour cream makes me nervous.
- 7.) At least twelve other things make me nervous.
- 8.) I'm a two-timing bastard (the first piece I've gotten published on campus was for the Denisonian).

Thank you for reading and it's so nice to meet you at last, dedicated fan base. Talk to you soon, or maybe not.

IN OTHER NEWS

Natasha Lyonne, best known for her roles as lesbian in But I'm a Cheerleader, lesbian in Orange Is The New Black, and lesbian in Addicted to Fresno is straight. I found out via this tweet:

I thought this was gonna be mind-blowing news because my roommates and I just spent our Saturday watching Orange Is The New Black. So I shared it, obviously. I was wrong.

Today 4:41 PM

I just found out Natasha Lyonne is not gay

HUH

claire

this is a known fact

LMAO

Apparently this is well known. It hurts to be out of the loop, so I am passing down this knowledge so that no one else has to suffer the same humiliation. Don't knock yourself if you didn't know this because to be fair, "she literally is so gay."
