NOT DRESSED WITH SOMEWHERE TO BE

Submission: ok the overall vibe here is i genuinely dont really like any of them rn i think i look really nice in halter necks but the halter polkadot one is a little beach cover up-y. I'm having a hard time trying to balance that this dress is NOT a beach cover up, stock sundress, or wedding reception dress. It feels like so many are either too formal or not enough. anyway id love to hear your thoughts. im still looking.

Response: Sorry you're still looking for a graduation dress. Since I don't know what's in your heart, I will not look for other options, just give input on what you provided me. End of the day, you'll look sunkissed and spruce as walk across that stage!

I'm going to echo what you said. So beachy. You're not graduating on East Quad. Maybe if you give up on your last sem and buff your arms out, the muscles might distract from the 60's-ness of it?

This is probably the most wedding-y dress you sent me. It's not bad, but you're also not receiving your diploma at a California desert wedding.

This is a fun one. I like it. I think those sleeves help take away from a beach vibe and there's no chance you'd look bridal. Unless you wore a veil, then maybe 80's bride appropriation? Final thoughts, I think this is a solid option, or at the very least strong back up choice.

My recommendation: Now this is a fun, fun, fun dress. Even though this isn't a halter neck, I think the asymmetrical cut is a good substitute. Also, the waistband being on a diagonal helps it be less bridal and more fun.

PLASTIC SUCKS!!!

We've all heard stories
about fish choking
on plastic

yet we still reach
for that shiny plastic
soda bottle.

But, its stupid to poison ourselves
for a drink.

Show your support
for replacing plastic soda bottles in slayter with aluminum cans.
