1. To bring in the new—and lead out the old

What is a game? What isn't? In this

Tiny sparkling dot, dancing, hoping,

And then—the game

The lights. The sounds. I feel so small,

Pint size... or punt size?

Back and forth

And forth

And back and the quarter

Back is patrick

Hat trick.... Kicking and swinging

And usher—rush-er

And it's all over

2. And the chiefs win the super

VALENTINE'S DAY IS FOR LOSERS

Christine Trueh,
Certified Lover Boy

Are you feeling a bit sad that you're single on Valentine's Day? Don't feel bad, there are so many other holidays that are completely better than a random day in February. Here are some of the reasons why Valentine's Day is just another washed-up holiday. To be honest, I feel like this list makes me sound like a hater, but I think I'm taking an optimistic approach.

»—▶ 60% of college couples who decide to spice up Valentine's Day with a little romance end up with an unexpected twist—a baby on the way! Who needs that kind of surprise?

»—▶ Chocolate kills you

»—▶ The peak of cheating occurs just two weeks after the lovey-dovey madness of Valentine's Day. So, if you're single now, congratulations.

»—▶ On average, consumers drop a whopping $116.21 on Valentine's Day. Imagine what you could do with that money instead! Spoiler alert: A lot more fun things than a heart-shaped balloon and a teddy bear.

»—▶ Did you know the flower industry makes a killing on Valentine's Day? Literally. The demand for roses is so high that it contributes to the exploitation of florists.

»—▶ More than 80% of New Year's resolutions related to love or relationships have already gone down the drain by Valentine's Day. Who needs that kind of commitment anyway? Dodged another bullet!
