BEER & BEVERAGE TIER LIST

Karl Ivsin,
Submission

The investigation in evaluating beer and beverages is, without any cent of doubt, anything but and far from what may appear to be a primitive discussion. It has come to the attention of many beer lovers and colleagues on this great golf course of a campus that a new world order, a new beer order, is in dire need of coming to and to be discussed by the public in a formal manner. Many of my colleagues have abdicated from their positions of beer and beverage enjoyment, nearly giving up beer entirely due to the turmoil that the “beer evaluations” has brought upon us. Enjoyment being better understood as a lifestyle, not a leisure activity.

However, the issue at hand is all mis-speculation and, put simply, a product of misinterpretation, not an efficacy of misinformation:

“The beverages listed are in no particular order, but my thoughts on these beverages are irrefutable. If you disagree with my expert analysis, you will have to take your complaints to my lawyer.” (Anonymous, 1)

In fear of legal trouble, let it be whole heartedly understood that this is not an attack on the list in itself, nor is it an attack of its respectfully anonymous creator. Contention is far from what the beverage enjoying community needs.

Simply, this is a traditional graded tier list so that “Beer Evaluations” may be best understood by the public and beer enjoyers alike.

Although the tier list is primarily concerned with ranking the beverages presented within “Beer Evaluations”, we will also consider several beers that are not on the list for the sake of good tastes and prevalence in the community. Those being; Modelo Black, Corona, Fat Tire, Mickey Ultra, Sapporo, Miller High Life, Pacifico, Red Stripe, Yuengling, and Coors Banquet.

Notes:

- There is no rudimentary order of the beverages in each grade. They are in order of most favored to least favored, with most favored starting on the left.
- Modelo ≠ Corona
- Modleo Black ≠ Modelo
- It is not at all fair to generalize IPA's, mixed drinks, and wine as one class of their own, but we will here for the sake of simplicity.
- This list is far from perfection. I implore my peers and scholars alike to erect a list of their own simply in aspiration of peace within the community.

TOP 5 DENISON ELEVATORS

(to be trapped in)

Robert Adams,
Submission

We fucking love elevators. However, with the vast number of them present on campus, it can be hard to figure out which ones are really worth your time. To fix this, I trapped myself within every single elevator on campus, and I will now share my favorites with you :)

5. Eisner Elevator

This elevator is spacious. This is definitely an elevator where you could assign a piss corner/sleep corner etc. Plus, you can listen in on the musical things happening in Eisner! It's exactly like a required concert (but you're trapped in an elevator).

4. Crawford Elevator

With this elevator, it really is all about the journey. To enter, you have to sneak onto the cleaning crew's cart. They will then escort you past the locked door, directly into the usually-inaccessible elevator. Once you sneak off of the cart, it doesn't even matter that you willingly entered Crawford Hall. It's a nice, vintage elevator entrapment experience.

3. Burton Morgan Elevator

I know this is the Bullsheet and all, but I gotta legitimately just say that this is a really pretty elevator. There's a picture of campus on all of the walls and even a little design on the back of the door! You could meditate in this elevator. That being said, it is interesting that the elevator below the admissions office gets that extra attention...

2. Slayter Elevator

This is the extrovert's favorite elevator. As the school's primary bulletin board, the legion of posters within provide adequate reading material for your entrapment period. You can really get in tune with what's popping on campus. Additionally, the high foot traffic throughout Slayter means you'll almost certainly be trapped with new friends! There's nothing like elevator induced Stockholm-Syndrome to help you build new trauma bonds!

1. Knapp Elevator

This elevator hates you. The doors slam when they open and close and the chamber shakes viciously as it slowly creeps towards your destination. This elevator probably listens to Deftones. When you get stuck in it, your flight or fight response gets activated and you fully become an animal. It's like injecting lethal amounts of caffeine directly into your carotid artery. When it happened to me, I clawed my way out of there howling and screaming and left a me-shaped hole in the wall. 10/10, a truly unforgettable experience.
