TORNADO WARNING PACKING LIST

Eleanor Mason,
Freshman Writer

Scenario. It's 5:30 in the morning. You are in the middle of a wonderful dream when suddenly a horrible, jarring sound yanks you from your slumber. You groan and move to flip your phone over, ready to snooze the alarm and get back to sleep. Alas, today you won't be so lucky. It's a tornado warning, and you need to get to the basement. For a moment you consider just staying put and hoping the tornado doesn't take you. Your pillow looks very inviting, and it takes all your willpower just to roll over and stand up. By now, you've wasted a lot of time, and every second you spend searching the room is another second that the tornado could touch down and take you with it. You start to freak out. "What am I supposed to bring with me?" you ask, clinging hopelessly to 11 stuffed animals, an empty yogurt cup, and a Buzzy body pillow. Well, worry not dear friend. In honor of the Great Tornado of February 28, please enjoy our stress-free tornado packing list.

1. Phone - To track the tornado
2. Gigantic map and thumbtacks - To track the tornado, grandpa-style
3. Red string - To make conspiracy connections about the tornado (the truth is out there)
4. Swipe - If your door is still there when you get back, you'll want this
5. Crash cymbals - To perform your magnum opus (the audience can't run this time)
6. 2,674 earwigs - Even a cramped hallway can feel pretty lonely sometimes
7. Rotting leaves - To feed the earwigs
8. Lasso - To catch deserters
9. Hákarl - Nothing satisfies the tornado munchies like fermented shark
10. Weather vane - To measure wind (if there's any, that's bad)
11. The Bullsheet - For obvious reasons

A LEAP DAY CONCERT Q&A

Caroline Concannon,
Junior Editor

I headed to the Bandersnatch with a happy attitude and an appreciation for what Leap Day could bring! My three roommates Megan, Emily, and Charlotte performed at the a capella concert held at the Bandersnatch and boy was it a crazy event!!! I will die for the "Disney Medley. And, congratulations to Charlotte for finally getting serenaded during "Only You". I thought that I would use the concert as an opportunity to temp check the school on Leap Day!

1. How do you define Leap Day?

"Umm, you know, its--I guess you'd define it as undefinable, you know. There's some leaping of the years, but maybe its a spiritual thing?" - Liam Kazznelson, DuWop God and Hilltopper

2. Whats your favorite song of the night?

Caroline Concannon,
Junior Groupie

"I think the best song of the night so far was 'Army' by The Ben Folds' Five as sung by The Hilltoppers."
- Emmet Anderson, President of the Hilltoppers

So basically I had a little too good of a time at the show and only managed to interview these two. But I loved the show and had a great Leap Day! Hope the same for you <3
