

April 25th, 2024

GRANVILLE'S MOST DETAILED PUBLICATION

Vol. XLV, No. 125

WHAT WOULD BOB DO (WWBD)

Lucy Hollingsworth-Hays, Dope

What is your reaction to tall, cigarette-smoking, likely manipulative, Jack Skellington - look alike brunette men? Is it disgust? Is it fear? Is it the odd desire to raise them as your own? Or, even better, is it the wish to know more?? In that case, boy do I know what you should be doing on Friday, April 25th at 7pm!! Experiencing an hour of music crafted by the blueprint of the man described above: none other than Bob Dylan!!

To get in the Dylan spirit, I thought I would compile a list of things that Bob Dylan would do. Don't try this at home.

--> Bob, if faced with the comical housing situation on this campus, would simply refuse to move into a residence hall. He was actually (this is true) detained by the New Jersey police in 2012 on suspicion of being homeless, since he was wandering around a suburban neighborhood in the rain. Bob would NOT approve of First Year Quad.

--> These sunny days that seem to make everyone on this campus put down Canvas and pick up a marg wouldn't phase Bob, given he's played 100 concerts a year since the year 1988. This, again, is an insane true fact: he's been constantly on the road as a part of his 'Never Ending Tour'. I bet you senioritis-havers feel stupid now!

--> Bob Dylan is infamous for not showing up: for example, he was notably absent when he was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2016. For the first time ever, I advise you to go against our friend Bob and DO show up... to the Bob Dylan concert the Bluegrass program is putting on this Friday, in Swasey Chapel, at 7pm!!! Be there or be forever known as a flake, like Dylan! But in your case not in a cool way!

Guys, Bob Dylan is cool, harmonicas are cool, 200 Chapel Drive Granville Ohio is cool. Add yourself to that list by attending this concert! Make sure to bring your harmonica neck-mounts, high expectations, and a dream. Lots of love. See you there.

STUDY ABROAD GUIDE FOR UNDERCLASSMEN

Elliot Harpham,
Foreign Correspondent

Are you an underclassmen trying to figure out where to study abroad? Lost and don't know where to go? Let us make it simple for you! Here's a simple guide to deciding where you should go on your experience abroad. See what applies to you, and let us know where you end up!

Staying on Campus:

Ooooooooooooo, STEM major, I had noooooo idea, no, you haven't mentioned its a hard being STEM. Big woop.

Copenhagen, Denmark:

Do you have seasonal depression? Want to make it worse? Copenhagen is perfect for you! With gray, cloudy skies that piss on you at inconvenient times, the most light you'll get is from the flourescent dorm lamps reflecting off of your pale skin and whitefish dinner. Don't worry though, you can always treat your depression the Danish way: Binge Drinking! $10 pints means you'll break your bank just as fast as your spirit. Classic Scandinavian efficiency at its best. If you like feeling bad about your style and educational experiences, and are dying to turn into a submissive granola-crunch male, Copenhagen is where you HAVE to be.

Barcelona, Spain:

Are you in Greek Life at a state school? Have you taken Spanish for 6 years but still can't speak it? Is your credit card in your name, but linked to your dad's account? When someone asks you if you are studying abroad, do you say "yeah, I'm studying a few of them, actually"? If yes, then Barcelona is the place to be. Wall Street bars, dorms full of Americans, and the chance to live in Spain for 4 months and not speak Spanish at all, not even once! Top attractions include a half-finished church, an ugly house, and a nude beach full of clothed people hoping to catch a glimpse. If you grew up on the east coast and want to say you studied abroad but actually just mingle with people from high school, Barcelona is waiting!

Amsterdam, The Netherlands:

I mean, come on. This one is pretty self explanatory, you know who you are. Make sure you pack plenty of "vintage" clothes.

To be continued...

STOP THE ICE BUCKET CHALLENGE REMAKE!

Lucy Dale,
Fights for other causes

Not trying to be that person but...We already did the whole ice bucket challenge. Like, please don't nominate me because I did my time, I dumped a bucket of water on my head in the fourth grade. My crush nominated me, and I had my mom post the video on her Facebook page. Did I ever figure out what ALS is? No, but I know it's the ALS Ice Bucket Challenge, and I'm not a fan of this 2025 remake. And to be clear, I'm not against any of the causes, I support mental illness—I mean, I don't support it, but...you know what I mean. Anyway, just come up with something new! Like, how would it look if we just started eating Tide pods again? Probably pretty silly.

Here are some ideas for a viral trend that can support a good cause:

- Trauma Dumping on Instagram Live
- Cartwheeling down a steep hill
- Re-posting the Snapchat Memories that are with people you don't talk to anymore
- Drinking a jar of pickle juice in ten seconds
- Smiling at strangers and death staring at acquaintances

Bull Terrier Brand

"When you want it strong and bold, and you want it fast!"

Instant Coffee

Staff "Bullsheet Budget Approved?" Box
Caroline "Yes" Lopez, Managing Editor Selah "Yes" Griffin, Senior Editor Emmy "Yes" Ayad, Senior Editor Brin "Yes" Glass, Senior Editor
Caroline "Poop" Concannon, Head Writer Ella "Yes" Buzas Senior Writer Griffin "Yes" Conley, Senior Writer Micah "Si" DeLorenzo, Senior Writer Tatum "Yes" Thomas, Senior Writer Carter "Yes" Seipel, Foreign Correspondent Arianna "Yes" Griffiths, Junior Writer Elliot "Yes" Harpham, Foreign Correspondent Leah "Yes" Jackson, Foreign Correspondent Christine "Yes" Trueh, Foreign Correspondent Lucy "Yes" Dale, Sophomore Writer Eleanor "Yes" Mason, Sophomore Writer William "Yes" Eddleman, Freshman Writer Lindsey "Yes" George, Freshman Writer Lucy "Yes" Hollingsworth-Hays, Freshman Writer Hayley "Yes!" Shay, Freshman Writer

no YOU'RE fake as fuck