WHAT'S WITH THE HYPE?

Lindsey George,
Halloween Hater

Dearest readers,

Here we are again. Last time we met like this, I was complaining about fall as a whole. The entire season felt my wrath. This time, I'm narrowing the scope of my distaste. Halloween. the constant, month long preparation. The endless conversations, and discussions, and arguments about costumes. The epic buildup followed by existential letdown. The pressure to be unmatched in creativity and the chaos of living up to the expectations of the Pinterest Gods. I find very little joy in the entire ordeal. Many will argue that Halloween is the time to receive as much free candy as you can collect, and to that I say that Target is 10 minutes down the road, and I could pay under $10 for a whole bag for myself, and enjoy it from the comfort of my cozy bed and my purple pajama set. Also, orange. Why orange? Aside from its seasonal significant apparent in the foliage, I don't see any reason to give orange such a big moment. Just me?

I don't mean to be a Debbie Downer. Of course, Halloween brings so much joy to so many young children, and so many not-so-young children too. It's festive, fun, and FANTASTIC! Get in the spirit, everyone. I hope that you may find yourself in the Halloween Spirit. If you find extra spirit, feel free to pass it along. Until then, I hope this doesn't cause too great of a rift between us. I'm still me, I promise.

Merry Christmas,

Lindsey
