HELP!!! WE'VE BEEN TRANSFORMED INTO A SIPS DRINK!!!

Lily Reaser,
Runs on SIPS

I was studying for finals last night when a little birdie landed on my window sill and told me “there’s a drink waiting for you at sips!” So I hobbled all the way to Slayter and low behold, there it sat, “The Bullsheet”. A delicious brown sugar maple latte. Delectable, scrumptious, other words to describe yummy; it was the perfect pick me up. It tastes just like the Starbucks brown sugar shaken espresso but for only $6 instead of $15 and my soul. I am now so locked in on writing this Bullsheet instead of studying or writing.

So make sure to go harass the Sips employees for a “The Bullsheet” today! And a huge thank you to Sips for taking Carter’s article from like a month ago seriously.

To all our readers in the U.S.,
This Tuesday Thursday your support is requested by the nonprofit that hosts Wikipedia ~~The Bullsheet~~ and other free knowledge projects. If you can comfortably afford it this year, please join the readers who donate. These donations help to support the technology that makes our projects possible and also provide legal protections that help to advance the cause of free knowledge in the world and expand information access in countries struggling with censorship. Today, we invite you to donate $5 or whatever seems right. Show the world that access to credible, neutral information matters to you. Thank you.

— The Wikimedia Foundation ~~Bullsheet~~ (A FREE Daily Publication)

Proceeds will (seriously) go towards more pop events (similar to Tuesday’s Budget Petting Zoo), on bigger campus-events open to students like you, pranks/silly stunts, and buying ourselves back from Netflix.
