

THE BAGEL QUIZ

Meredith,
full of cream cheese

Maybe some of you went home and ate bagels, maybe some of you are hoping to stop by the Bandersnatch to grab a bagel now that you are back. (This isn't a promotion for the Bandersnatch though, but it might make people crave bagels and thus encourage them to purchase one. The Bullsheet is not getting compensated for this article, but maybe we should because it is such great advertising.... Hey, Bandersnatch...could all of us on the Bullsheet staff claim a free bagel since we are giving you business? If that's too much to ask you could just give me, Meredith Havre, a free milkshake? That would be fine too. I'd be totally ok with that just because people are definitely going to buy bagels. You can email us at bullsheet@denison.edu, so let us know.) Through a few simple questions I can deduce the essence of your being and which bagel represents that essence. If you want to know what kind of bagel you are, take this quiz to find out.

If you are an asiago cheese bagel, congratulations you are everybody's favorite. You represent all the goodness in the world. 10/10. No notes. The lactose intolerant people are even willing to risk eating you, this means you get along with everyone and have no enemies.

If you are a plain bagel, you are fine. No one expects anything more from you than you can't provide. You haven't accomplished anything, and you probably never will but that's ok. You know who you are, and you've accepted these facts because you just don't have that drive to succeed.

If you are a blueberry bagel, you are pretty good. Not everyone likes you, but you just tell yourself that you're not for everybody, an acquired taste. Some people don't want a sweet bagel. You're sweet and you should be proud of that, but there are still improvements to be made. You should invest in a self-help book, because sometimes people get the impression that you're arrogant. You put on a front for people. On the outside, you're all toasted and brown. On the inside, you show your true colors. Don't be afraid to let those colors shine sometimes, that's what makes people like you. Show your sweet side and stop acting so tough.

If you are a bagel sandwich, you might be a child of divorce. You've definitely had some emotional turmoil in your life. You have a lack of emotional intelligence, and you probably don't even know what that means. People like you just find it because you're funny; however, you're only funny because you're traumatized. You had just come to terms with having this hole that you could never fill, when your whole life was torn in half. You've tried to fix this by picking up various hobbies and interests, like adding eggs or bacon. You keep trying to change your personality to see what fits, maybe you've tried salmon and capers. There are some deep identity issues there, like are you a bagel or are you a sandwich. You live a life of misery and anguish, but pretend you're so fulfilled. It's sad honestly. Just sad.

I was thinking about getting a tree for the Bullsheet office to make it more festive. Once this arrives, I'm sure the mailroom can store it once the holiday season is over.
