Santa Crum's Naughty & Nice List

Anna Crum,
a.k.a. Santa Crum

Year after year, we are reminded of where the true measure of a person can be found. A person's value can't be measured by their wealth, nor by the number of friends they have, or by whom they have helped and hurt in their life. It cannot be found by Anubis's scale of justice, weighing the heart against a feather. Your greatest sins and kindnesses can merely act as a predictor. The truth is, you can't know how you're doing in this life. You don't know where you fall on the scale of good to be because the idea of that scale is made up by your fellow flawed beings anyway. But once a year, we are given a gift. A completely objective outside observer of each of our lives sends us symbolic items that represent what we deserve. Santa Claus, our omnipresent secular embodiment of morality, is soon to be upon us. I already have a solid idea of what side of his list I'll be on, so I might as well make predictions about others.

My lips are a desert, and these are my sweet quenching ichors.

Put your trench coat on, you dirty flasher. Also, anti-pregnant people? Not everyone wants their bully rubbed. STOP normalizing it.

Liechtenstein gave my chihuahua CPR for a full 35 minutes until the ambulance arrived. He was pronounced dead on arrival, but the effort was valiant.
