The Bullsheet has received breaking news that a new substance, “L.O.V.E.,” has been released into the air. Peak saturation of this mysterious substance will last approximately 24 hours, starting at 12:00 a.m. on February 14th, 2026.

While neither the full name of said substance nor an official list of symptoms has yet to be released, our experts have been working around the clock to give Denisonians an idea of just how serious this contaminant is.

Symptoms may include:

- Eyes expanding to at least 4 times their original size and bulging out of one’s eye sockets
- Tongue falling and rolling out of one’s mouth to the floor, sometimes creating a stair-like structure
- Turning into Lego Batman as “(I Just) Died in Your Arms” by Cutting Crew plays from an unknown location
- Spending money you do not have
- A temporary malformation of one’s heart in which it takes an anatomically unnatural shape and breaks through the ribcage, stretching the skin, creating a protruding outline on one’s chest
- May cause changes in behavior, mood swings, visual and auditory hallucinations, and in some cases, death.

Bullsheet correspondence is currently looking for any information about what this acronym stands for, hoping it will give us a clue as to what this dangerous substance consists of. If you have any ideas, please fill in the following blanks and send them to bullsheet@denison.edu.
